...Center

(Continued from Page A-1) that can carry on a vocational training program on its own will be encouraged to do so," he commented.

Criteria for course offerings at the center will be fourfold, he stated. They include: a demonstrated need in business or industry for the skill; sufficient student interest in the program; the need for the program is not being met at other institutions in the area; and consideration will be given to the private sector in the field in question.

To achieve common goals, Dr. Butterbaugh said, the center will work with all educational institutions that make up the community, including the junior colleges and the four-year colleges. "If a junior college is fulfilling a need in a given area," he stated, "we won't run a program."

All high school students who wish to participate, including the handicapped, will be accepted when full-scale operations begin, the superintendent said.

Girls as well as boys will be taught.

THE CENTER will attempt to inform prospective students as early as sixth grade of their offerings.

Emphasis will be on quality rather than quantity of course offerings, Dr. Butterbaugh stated. "We can't afford to put our stamp of approval on a trainee unless he meets high standards," he commented.

Facilities at the center's Crenshaw Boulevard location will not be completed until mid-March, so temporary facilities will be used during the first few weeks of class, he pointed out. Classes will begin Feb. 5.
